CAREER OBJECTIVE

To contribute meaningfully to academia as an Assistant Professor through impactful teaching and original research on political centralization, governance, and regional autonomy to promote critical thinking and interdisciplinary dialogue while advancing the thought of schools in political science, public administration, and federal studies.

RESEARCH INTEREST

My research explores the dynamics of political centralization and its impact on governance, autonomy, and regional identity, with a specific focus on Jammu & Kashmir as a case study. I examine the implications of policy shifts, institutional restructuring, and constitutional changes on federal relations in India. My work integrates perspectives from political science, federalism studies, and regional development.
